ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON BUSINESS PROCESS RE-ENGINEERING IN THE MODERN ERA

TIME: 9:00 AM

VENUE: LS HALL

INAUGURATION

In the presence of the chief guests, Mr Tiruchi Siva (Member of Parliament), Dr. N. Kannan I.P.S. (Inspector General of Police, Tamil Nadu North Zone), Rev. Fr Principal, Coordinator Dr S. Prasanna Kumar, and other faculty members, the event began with a prayer to the almighty god and was then followed by Tamil Thai Vazhthu. Dr. S. Prasanna Kumar opened the ceremony by welcoming everyone and recalled the events and conferences that took place the year before. His lucid presentation of BPR using the digitalization of Loyola was well received by the gathering and how the current situation would help entrepreneurs grow and expand their views were shared by him.

Dynamics of the Conference by Dr Alexander Yobu.

Dr. Alexander Yobu spoke about the importance of BPR, and highlighted that it can be used for working on the grey areas of the business, for which he took the examples of Toyota and Ford. He talked about how BPR represents fundamental foundations by taking examples of the previous processes and how they needed improvements. He began by outlining a case study related to Automobiles and provided an overview of the recently created business processes "Six Sigma" which encourages businesses to enhance their business and cut costs by using available resources. BPR starts with how there should be a new and clean perspective by developing new objectives which focus on efficiency while also keeping the customers in mind. Dr Alexander concluded with a brief introduction of the panel, moderators, and the topics to be discussed on the National Conference.

Rev. Father Principal's Address to The Gathering:

Rev. Dr A. Thomas, SJ, principal deliberated about the volatile world and how BPR helps industries to manage and adapt in the dynamic environment. He then focused on how BPR would help the students to help them prepare for their future endeavours. He welcomed all the students from other colleges who came to participate in the conference and conveyed his wishes to the entire conference team.

Address by Chief Guest by Dr. N. Kannan:

Chief Guest Dr N. Kannan (Inspector General of Police) started his speech by extending his gratitude to all the attendees, the principal, and the faculty members. He began by outlining his understanding of the subject, saying that re-engineering is like enhancing daily operations in order to maintain and grow the business. He began by drawing a comparison to his line of work. He then continued about his tenure as the FRRO in Shastri Bhavan and the changes that he brought about to reduce the processing time for foreigners with the advent of technology. He focused on how it should be efficient and cost-effective. He argued how it should add value in the improvement of business processes towards productivity and cost. He also provided ideas on how to have better outcomes. For that, he instructed students to complete projects, engage in practical labor, and approach this as a daily activity rather than a single subject. He continued with how re-engineering brings forth change and with this change requires proper management and adaptation.

Report on National Conference on Business Process Re-Engineering in the Modern Era
28th February, 2023

Chief Guest Lecture by Mr. Tiruchi Siva:

He started off by thanking everyone and the student who had gone to contact Mr. Tiruchi Siva in order for him to come and honour us with his presence. He started by describing how he pursued his dreams while studying for a B.A. in English literature. He explained that "re-engineering" is a word for cleverness, specifically business-related cleverness. The main guest, Mr. Kannan, received praise for his actions. He was responsible for the government approving this statute as a privilege for transgender people. He put this law into effect. He then concentrated on discussing how he learned about BPR and how crucial its execution strategy is. He said how it went to the root word of Re-engineering and how this can not only be applied to the business field but to all fields of work.

He stated that BPR can be described as a strategy for technology. He reminded us that it is the business that is reliant on its customers and not the opposite. He continued how currently, there is a heavy reliance on technology and how most people, even if they do not use it extensively, are still reliant on it. Re-Engineering is sustainability and survivability. He advised to not confine re-engineering only to business as for a man to achieve he must survive, sustain and succeed. Then, He urged everyone in academia and industry to find answers to the most urgent problems facing the world, including how to eliminate nuclear waste, create renewable energy, and improve employment opportunities.

PANEL DISCUSSION - 1

- Mr. Sreejith S. J., Marketing Head, Coca-Cola, Chennai.

Moderator, Mr. G. Sivachander, was called to introduce the major subject that would be covered in the panel discussion. Mr. Ramesh was then asked to begin the session with the first lecture. What is business to you?, he asked as he opened the conversation. He said that business has various structures. Then he went onto explain about the scope in trading. Panel member Mr. Sasikumar came to speak, he talked about his own profession in the field of Human Resource and about how a person should be able to adapt to the situation and to learn more about business. He further advised to be prepared for everything and to have knowledge regarding finance as well as the stock market and to learn more about the country's economy. As students, we should focus on promoting the economy of the country. Finally, the third panelist Mr. Sreejith started his talk with the question, “What is Marketing?”

After a few answers from the audience, he continued talking about his experience when working in the marketing field. He talked about B2C and a marketing tool implementation that he had initiated with some of his friends. He talked about how you should analyze data and on what basis and based on this, to create a marketing mix that would work well for that market. He gave ideas to identify how we should focus on what is high in demand in the market. He talked about knowing your customers as one of the important points. This continued with a few examples of his experience working for Coca-Cola in regard to how they marketed the products and the number of profits they made with these projects. After these lectures, the moderator asked the panelists a few questions tackling the topic of its effects on Business Procedure Re-Engineering. After this a Q&A session was initiated and the panel discussion came to an end.

VALEDICTORY FUNCTION – 3:00 P. M.

her achievements such as establishing a hospital and is also currently the director of the Hindustan College of Arts and College. She then continued with a question, "What is the secret of happiness?". She continued to talk about how humans are social animals and then proceeded with how having good social connections leads to happiness in this modern society. But after several years, she had read and learned that most of the people in this developed world choose to be alone and tend to spend time by themselves. Thus, she advised developing social relations/connections. Following this, the chief guest continued by saying to re-engineer our lifestyles and our minds to break this stigma. The convenor, Dr. Smitha was then invited on stage to call out the winners for the Paper Presentation.
